NATIONAL REPUBLICAN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 5, 1881.

MORE LOCAL POETS. She heard the angels calling her From that celestial shore; she flapped her wings and away she went To make one angel more.

There was a gay maiden named Fanny, Who wouldn't darn socks for her granny; But she'd sit all the day, And she'd hammer away, Like a planner upon the planny,

-Jim McDowell. The evening for her bath of dew is partially undressed; The sun behind a bobtail finsh Is setting in the West. The planets light the heavens with The flash of their cigars; The sky has put its night-shirt on, And buttoned it with stars.

-George Parker. She manufed "Isn't this lovely-This will breeze, so cooling and sweet!" As it level with her curls and her ribbons, while the shore took the marks of her feet. Ah saddenly there in a minute Did vanish that smile and that pout,

For the breeze it got stronger and turned her Parreol inside out. -Frank Hollingshead. "Where are you going my pretty maid?" "I min bound for the matinee," she said.

And soon was heard on the lonesome street

The ponderous trend of her mammoth feet. There is no circus tent, howe'er much watched and numbed. flat aceds some greater care;

There is no hole, however well defended, But has a small boy there. -Major Brock. PARTED.

BY F. A. RICHARDSON. "Twas in the dismal dead of night, A cat sat on the fence, His eyes stuck out and his tail stuck up,

He said in a sad-eved heart-howed strain. Where can Mariar be?" The shadows float on the castle wall, But Mariar-where hangs she?

And he looked and felt immense,

He sang so long and sang so loud, A bootjack flew his way, Alas! Mariar waits for him Each night till break of day. She walts and weens. Mariar does.

Yet through the dark there nightly rings Mariar's mournful "me-ow," FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

But never comes he new.
